APPRENTICES' LIBRARY COMPANY

OF PHILADELPHIA.

THE Board of Managers of the Apprentices' Library, respectfully reports,—that during the year just passed, there have been loaned from the Boys' Library, 18,717 volumes, and from the Girls' Library, 16,253 volumes. There are now out 726 volumes from the Boys' Library, and 586 volumes from the Girls'. In the course of the year, 481 new books have been added to the former, by purchase, and 356 to the latter, and 1111 new applicants have been admitted to the privileges of the institution, of whom 732 were boys, and 379 girls. Besides the works purchased, a number of donations have been received, from the Smithsonian Institute, Patent Office Department, and other sources, which have been duly acknowledged.

Although the above statistics display a decrease in the number of books loaned, the number of new applicants, and of individuals using the Library, it is nevertheless a satisfactory exhibit, considering certain causes which have worked against us. There has been started within a few years a very laudable institution, similar in most respects to our own, which has successfully labored in the same cause. The last annual report of the Young Man's Institute, shows, that there had been loaned the preceding year, from the West Philadelphia, Southwark, Moyamensing, Spring Garden, and City Institutes, altogether, upwards of 32,000 volumes, and that their libraries contained in the aggregate, more than 11,000, thus nearly doubling the facilities for free reading, offered by the Apprentices' Library alone before. As these Institutes have become known, numbers, to whom they were more accessible, have naturally forsaken us,—and a greater decrease might have been anticipated.

The Treasurer's Report is hereunto appended. It will be noticed that the necessary outlays for salaries, repairs, gas, fuel, &c., consume about two-thirds of our present income, leaving a small sum to be expended in increasing the library. The Report of the Institute before referred to, states, that over $50,000 have been contributed to their funds by private munificence. We would respectfully call the attention of the benevolent to our fund, and suggest, that if the individual members would send proper persons to use the library, and make occasional exertions to swell its list of contributors, they would greatly increase our sphere of usefulness. Few objects are more worthy of philanthropic support; for no cure to sensual indulgence among youth, is so infallible as the counter charm of intellectual pleasure, nor any earthly balm more soothing to the pains of an old age in penury, than that which flows from this unfailing source. Books are always even-tempered friends—moderators in prosperity and comforters in adversity. Men may lack food and clothing, but a well-toned and well-trained mind will rise above every misery.

Since the last report, a mansion in Arch Street, belonging to the Greenfield estate, has been sold for $11,000; another house, of the same estate, has been sold for $7500, and still other properties remain unsold; no further division having been made during the year to the beneficiaries of this trust.

The general impropriety of admitting works of fiction to our shelves, has claimed the attention of the Board, and they are almost unanimous in the opinion that abundance of interesting reading matter exists in the wide fields of history, biography, travels, and the like, to satisfy well organized minds, and that novel reading has mostly an unnatural and unhealthy tendency. The truths of history, and the adventures of travel, certainly contain enough that is marvellous and exciting to meet the cravings of any reasonable imagination.

To increase the use of the library, the Board have directed, that attractive cards setting forth its facilities, be hung conspicuously in Manufactories, and other public places.

Should our future efforts be wisely directed, we cannot doubt that the smiles of Heaven will rest upon them as heretofore, and that our interesting institution will continue to be the channel through which joy will flow to hearts who would otherwise have grovelled in the dust, causing sunshine to be shed, and blessings to be strewn in their path.

By order of the Board,

JAMES J. BARCLAY, Chairman.

WM. R. MAXFIELD, Secretary.
